

History (3rd Sem) Lec-1

Q: Explain the historical significance of the Industrial Revolution. (10 marks)

→ The Industrial Revolution was a period of major technological, economic, and social change that transformed the world from an agrarian society to an industrial one. It began in the late 18th century in Great Britain and spread to other parts of the world by the mid-19th century. The revolution was characterized by the development of new machinery, the growth of factories, and the rise of the middle class. It led to significant improvements in living standards and the emergence of modern nations.

The Industrial Revolution was a period of major technological, economic, and social change that transformed the world from an agrarian society to an industrial one. It began in the late 18th century in Great Britain and spread to other parts of the world by the mid-19th century. The revolution was characterized by the development of new machinery, the growth of factories, and the rise of the middle class. It led to significant improvements in living standards and the emergence of modern nations.

The Industrial Revolution was a period of major technological, economic, and social change that transformed the world from an agrarian society to an industrial one. It began in the late 18th century in Great Britain and spread to other parts of the world by the mid-19th century. The revolution was characterized by the development of new machinery, the growth of factories, and the rise of the middle class. It led to significant improvements in living standards and the emergence of modern nations.

The Industrial Revolution was a period of major technological, economic, and social change that transformed the world from an agrarian society to an industrial one. It began in the late 18th century in Great Britain and spread to other parts of the world by the mid-19th century. The revolution was characterized by the development of new machinery, the growth of factories, and the rise of the middle class. It led to significant improvements in living standards and the emergence of modern nations.